The Body in Women's Art Now: Part 2 - Flux investigates artworks that present the body as a site of instability and flux. The exhibition will explore how the body in flux becomes a vehicle to both celebrate female sexuality, and/or explore the darker side of human morality - and is used as both a celebratory and/or transgressive entity. The publication for The Body in Women's Art Now: Part 2 - Flux will include original essays contributed by Tracey Warr (writer, editor of The Artist's Body, Phaidon, 2000) and Philippa Found (exhibition curator) and Paul Carey-Kent.
